DAUGHERTY TO HOST ST. PATRICK'S DAY CONCERT TO BENEFIT PLACES FOR PEOPLE

Corporate Bands Unite for Good Cause

St. Louis, Missouri, January 30, 2009 – Daugherty Business Solutions will host a St. Patrick's Day Concert at the Sheldon Concert Hall on Tuesday, March 17th, 2009. Performing will be Not For A Billion—the Daugherty Party Band. Special guests will include The Monsanto Gene Jockeys. Admission for the event is $10 with all proceeds benefitting Places for People, a non-profit dedicated to providing individualized, high-quality and cost-effective services to adults with serious and persistent mental disorders so they can live, work, and socialize in environments of their own choosing.

Daugherty participated in The Sheldon's Battle of the Corporate Bands event in November of 2008. That concert benefited Music for Lifelong Achievement, a non-profit organization based at the Sheldon that donates used instruments to school and community music programs serving disadvantaged young people. "The Battle of the Bands event was such a positive experience, we wanted to find other ways our corporate band could help out non-profit organizations in our community," explained Ron Daugherty, President and CEO of Daugherty Business Solutions. "We decided to try to put together our own benefit concert and were really excited when other bands wanted to join in to help out Places for People." Daugherty started his corporate band in 2000. They play primarily R&B and classic rock. "The band just keeps growing. We now have bands in two of our other branches and are hoping to get them more involved in benefit concerts as well."

The Monsanto Gene
Jockeys

Joining the Daugherty Party Band will be the Monsanto Gene Jockeys. The Gene Jockeys are comprised of musicians from several local bands and plays a variety of genres including rock, country, R&B and blues. Collectively the group has over 60 years of experience. The band was put together by Keith Reding, Regulatory Affairs Manager at Monsanto, who is currently a member of All Mixed Up, a seven piece dance band that plays at local clubs and community functions. "Monsanto is excited to support Places for People, especially because it addresses an important need in the St. Louis community," Reding said. "Monsanto employees have a strong commitment to the places where we work and live, and we are happy to help Places for People continue the excellent work they have done in helping its clients find affordable housing".
